

Ode to the Amazons

by Kyle King (July 25th , 2005)

Traveling along the Aegean Sea
Searching for my history
An Amazon I want to be
I need her distinct strength.

Women led the ancient world
Without the fight, without the war
They led the clan for two thousand years
In peace and total harmony

Then fierce invaders from the north
Flood into the cities bent on war
They rape and kill... destroying the land
Worshiping death and the "mighty sword".

The clans, they leave their land and homes
Settling elsewhere, continuing on
They're chased and hunted for slavery
Until they can take it no more.

A legend is born of the Amazons
The women who were the "no husband ones"
They hastened to pick up the sword and shield
To fight for their clan matriarchy.

They didn't succumb to the oppressive foe
That threatened their lives and their vital force
They fought with courage and unity
For their children and their dignity.

So now, in the face of our current times
With a hierarchy undesired
Women with vision unparalleled
Are required to rise again.

An opportunity exists again
For women and their trusted kin
To realize their divine strength
To rise up and lead again.

Stand up in full regalia
With diadems, mirrors and the sword
Swords of truth that cut through time
When women led the world.

There is no "later", you will see
Right now is when the unity
Of women standing up as one
Will change our future times.

Our children are the ones, we know
Who require us all to act as one
A unified front of passion and focus
That will lead the world again.

We stand for peace and harmony
And life sustaining technologies
No more money spent on war
We'll spend it on longevity.

This movement requires our full force
Of focus and committed choice
Envision a life where peace resounds
And energy comes from within.

Come on ladies, now is the time
To look around, reflect and decide
Determine to find the source within
And take your sister's hand.

The Goddess is you, and you are She
She wouldn't neglect her destiny
You are designed for greater things
Women must lead again!

I sink my body into the Aegean Sea
Aware of my totality
As a woman with a destiny
To teach women to lead again.
